

Living in an Unpredictable World

Living in a world filled with climate change,
Weather that has developed an unpredictable range

Sea levels rising, storms growing stronger
No one ever expected this kind of monster

Some have never known this kind of worry
But for some this is all there's been in memory

Wondering what the next season will bring
It has become routine but still just as shocking

Homes will be lost, easy everyday life lost
Our overuse of resources has come at too high a cost

Hurricanes, blizzards, rising temperatures
It is hard to stay optimistic with such occurrences

There can be no more denying the little we reality we see
The storms we will see, they will go down in history

The next flood, fire, storm, it may force us to flee
Together we must band together with our communities

Resources, food, shelter, we must now have open arms
Those yet to be hurt must help those with larger qualms

But don't let this convince that all hope is gone
Working as one and working fast there is hope a new era can dawn.
