

As the climate rapidly changes,
the impoverished flee their homes.
Leaving everything and nowhere to go,
the refugees have nothing of their own.

As food and water become more scarce,
And resources run thin,
Those who can afford it will find food to eat and water to drink.
But those without are left with frowns in the place of a grin.

With clouds in the sky
and soot in the air,
The air we breathe
is no longer fair.

New technology develops each day,
Each have different promises to prevent climate change.
But this technology is expensive,
And those who can't afford it are left with nothing but pain.